Prize for e-learning tool

Comenius Award goes to Klüh Security

Düsseldorf, 3 August 2017 – Since 1995, the Society for Pedagogy, Information and Media (GPI) has been presenting the Comenius EduMedia Award annually in recognition of outstanding digital multimedia products in terms of pedagogy, content and design. The expert jury consists of scientists as well as specialists and educators from ten countries around the world and presented one of the coveted prizes to Klüh Service Management GmbH's security division at the "Digital Innovation in Europe" award ceremony, which took place at the end of June at the European House in Berlin. It was the e-learning tool, a digital learning management system developed by the company, that was given the award.

With its own in-house academy, Klüh, the Düsseldorf-based family enterprise, offers a wide range of seminars and workshops for supporting its employees' personal and professional further development. The web and computer-based learning management system provides an innovative and modern addition to traditional classroom training. "We are constantly developing our e-learning tool and will be expanding it to include a knowledge management system in the near future", says Pierre Tamke, head of the security school at Klüh Security.

GPI also awarded prizes to Deutsche Telekom and ZDF television, among others. The participants and jury subsequently exchanged information about learning and teaching with modern media, which again underlined the importance of future-orientated teaching materials.
